In The Black Sun, Stan Marlan takes us on an unflinching and ultimately healing journey through the shadowed land of despair where most abandon all hope.

There, we find, a strange light shines, and in that light we can discern what is otherwise invisible. Marlan teaches us how to see in the dark. — Murray Stein, author

Darkness and Art of Darkness explores darkness as a metaphor for negative psychological experiences, such as despair and depression. As a rule, Marlan maintains, Western psychology treats such “ dark ” experiences as purely negative, i.e. as experiences to be avoided or, at best, “ gotten through, ” rather than
